IN THE WAKE OF THE GAME

BY GUS MALBERT.

Six working days of the Virginia League season remain, and the race is settled. They will probably finish as they stand. Petersburg for the second time in three seasons, has won the pennant, with Roanoke, champions of last year, the runner-up. Richmond again lands in third place, Portspouth following, and the only battle yet to be decided being that between Neyport News and

It hasn't been a remarkable season. Richmond started like a winner, and for at least half the way had the best club in the league. The tam was running bases and hitting the ball with such regularity that the inheant weakness of the defense-poor pitching-didn't become noticeable until the batting slump arrived. Once in the throes of the slump, the inability of the hurlers to hold the opposition became apparent, but it was too late to mend the fences then, On top of the weak pitching came injuries to the men at critical times, lessening both the power of attack and the needed defense.

Petersburg came slower, but once in their stride, the Goolers went to the AUSTIN STARTS WITH VICTORY front, and haven't been headed for the past two months of the eason. Roanoke was really the only contender, but Buck Pressly was unable to muster him needed strength until the Buschmen were so far in the van that catching them was an impossibility. He deserves all credit for breasting and then passing the Colts. With a three and one-half game lead, he seems seere in his second place berth.

> If there has been a surprise, it is the showing made by Newport News. Starting out with a record run of seventeen straight games lost the Shipbuilders have pulled themselves out of last place, and will top Norfdk. Paul Davis, signed to manage the Builders, never reported, drawing his rlease soon after the directors found out that he hadn't gathered a ball club. Matty Broderick was hardly given a fair chance, and was given the slip soon aterwards, Harry Matthews taking charge. Matthews isn't the best manager i the world, and certainly not a man to build up friendships, but he has doneremarkably well with his charges. When he came he brought with him vierans of many campaigns, and they went in and won ball games. He had two good pitchers in Barton and Austin, and he added Nick Carter, who has dom effective work. Since taking hold he has won more than half the games playd, and really has something to brag about.

> Norfolk has been the real disappointment. Charlie Shaffe had signed the likeliest bunch of players on any club in the league, but they ailed to pan out. Early in the season he was compelled to give up active management of the club, and Kircher was put in charge. He failed to make god, and as a last resort Bud Ryan, who had the Wheeling team, in the Intersate League, was signed, after his league blew up. He brought with him som good men, and the Tars have been playing respectable ball since then.

> From a financial standpoint, the league seems to have pade money. In spite of our opinion, Newport News has been drawing wel. Roanoke and Portsmouth have been consistent losers, but have made up on the road what they lost at home. Lee Garvin has brought his club out ever by selling ball players. He got rid of Mundy and Herbert for good prices, lerbert bringing $2,000, really a record price when his age is taken into consideration, and Mundy brought $1,000, while Johnny Verbout was bought by Jersey City for $750, certainly money picked up, for John, much as we like him, has lever been a star pitcher. Besides, it is an odds on wager that Jimmie Tennant will be drafted. Altogether, Lee has had a very good year for his owners.

> Richmond has had a bang-up year at the turnstile. When the team was going good they were playing to standing room only, and even after the slump the crowds have not dropped off materially. But this season is practically over. Preparations must be started for next season.

Secretary Bradley refuses to say whether Steve Griffin wil be back next tina, Sweden and Canada.

The United States will defend the Johnson City is the winner of the 1913 again or not. The Richmond, Fredericksburg and Potomac is contemplating again or not. The Richmond, Fredericksburg and Potomac is contemplating to the site occupied by the pretty good thing to have a leader working during the off period getting ball

Speaking of the financial end of the league, it is by no means improbable that a change in the circuit will be made next season. Lynchbarg wants to get in, and, after a baseball famine of two years, the Shoemakers are about right to make some money. Portsmouth has been a derelict all season, and the magnates may decide to transfer the franchise. The change would certainly meet with the approval of Roanoke, since the Tigers want a team in the western part of the State to break the jump on the castern trips. The word has been passed, and the advisability of making the change will surely be discussed.

There will be another bidder just as soon as it is known that Portsmouth is in for a knifing. Suffolk wants to get into the Virginia League. They battled for the Portsmouth franchise before, and Charlie Bland won out for the Truckers. They will be on hand again to present their claims.

Still another problem will face the magnates. The Norfolk franchise is not owned by Norfolk people. It's supposed to be a secret, but everybedy in Norfolk knows who the owner is. It may or may not have something to do with the attendance in Norfolk, but the probability is that it has. The Pague may see fit to buy the Norfolk franchise and offer it to a syndicate of Norfolk men. It would be eminently wise and proper that the league take this action. If Norfolk men really want the franchise, they should be given the privilege of buying it. Then a proper test can be had as to whether Norfolk really wants

Sure it's a nice race in both the American and National Leagues, but make no mistake, and plan for your trips to New York and Philadelphia. Walle both Giants and Athletics have slumped during the past week, each has won half the games played, and both have substantial leads, figuring any way you want. The Athletics are six and one-half games ahead of the Naps, and finish a home; the Giants are eight games ahead of the Phillies, and both must take Vestern trips before the season ends, which puts them equal.

These slumps of the leaders are not unusual. With a world's series ahead, both managers realize that the men must get a rest. That's why they are not driven at top speed. However, let real danger threaten and watch both Mack and McGraw shoot their men forward at the same pace that put them out in Discussion of the relative merits of the two teams-Athletics and Gantsin doping out the result of the big contests is a sorry waste of time. If fans all over the United States could be evenly divided, the probability is that half would pick the Mackmen and the other half the McGrawites. It is the old question of sizing up relative ability when, in fact, the result is going to hinge rather on the condition of the men when they enter the lists than on what they have done during the playing season. McGraw has the speed and pitchers, say some; others opine that Mack has the offense and the science. It's tweedle dee and tweedle dum, and that's all there is to it. Sentiment, rather than reason, will rule in choosing a favorite, and the odds will favor the Mackian phalanx, largely because of their performance in the previous seitos.
